Agatha Crusty and the Village Hall Murders
by Derek Webb

Agatha Crusty (pronounced Croosty) gets caught up in a series of murders at the Village Hall. There are plenty of suspects. And with an incompetent investigating officer, there are plenty of laughs as the murders begin to pile up.

But, while packed full of wit and very funny scenes, this is also a genuine murder mystery with an ingenious plot which will tax the little grey cells of the audience at the same time!

Auditions are open to all (aged 18 or over) whatever your level of experience. If cast you will need to become a member (£10 subs).

Our auditions are informal and you do not need to prepare an audition piece. You will be asked to read parts of the script on your own or with others.
